FROM ACROSS THE ATLANTIC. The Washington Morning Chronicle of Feb. 8 thus comments on the Queen's Speech : "The admirable temper of this Speech, published yesterday morning in our foreign desputches, will commend it to a right-minded people. In view of the churlish complaints of some of her of subjects at the result of the Geneva and the Sau Juan arbitrations, it might naturally be expected that the Queen would pass over the topic very tersely and apologetically. On the contrary, she meets the question squarely, and o rejoices as heartily as did President Grant at the happy termination of the discussion. She utters no suspicion of unfairness. She feels that justice was done, and renders cordial thanks to those who decided against her Government, because she knows that they were actuated only by the strictest sense of equity. A decision unfavourable to the claims of her Government she regards as conclusive evidence that her Government was wrong and ours right. The triumph of the right, to a high-minded and. virtuous Sovereign, is always a cause for gratulation, and humiliating only to those who re-gard success as the test of merit. She does not take for her motto, 'my country, right or wrong.' Approaching the subject in so I frank and fearless a manner, her speech will the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not proviously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have beretofore characterized Chinese publications. To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the following facts are submitted for consideration. Chalmers' Vocabularly contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the 15 per cent. student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various appli cations and equivalents of different words which
